

CPU 2 Instructions

The CPU and RAM transfer values continuously. The CPU picks the next instruction to be performed from RAM, executes it, then places the result in the RAM. The locations inside the CPU are called registers. Each register has a name. Each location in the RAM has a unique address.

